Being Comfortable-- this summer

Is Merely a Matter of

Cooking With Gas

If the coal range overheated only the kitchen it wouldn't be so bad. But the heat won't stay in the kitchen. It slips into the dining room and goes all through the house.

A gas range, on the other hand, doesn't make even the kitchen hot.

Gas ranges are constructed on economical principles—to save heat, not waste it. A foot above the flame of a gas range there is no heat—you don't need any there—but just above the flame there is heat enough to cook food not only better but more rapidly than on a coal range.

Try a gas range this summer. You will find it cheap as well as comfortable. Gas costs less than coal. Ask any neighbor who is wise enough to use a gas range.

Gas Ranges?
